He is the author of the railway commission law, the freight rate law, employers' liability act and assisted in the passage of every measure for the benefit of the people that came before the senate of which he was a member.

EDGAR HOWARD'S LETTER TO GEO. M. HITCHCOCK

NO PROMISE OF SUPPORT FOR AN APOLOGY.

HITCHCOCK'S BLUFF DID NOT WORK.

The letter that Edgar Howard the democrats at the primaries was published in full in the Omaha Bee wrote G. M. Hitchcock after his nomination for United States Senate, by Friday Oct. 21.

Instead of Howard offering to support him if he would apologize for calling him a liar it is a defense of the grounds on which Howard opposed his nomination and a warning that if he accepted the nomination and became a candidate for the United States Senate that his connection with defaulting Omaha treasurer would be exposed and possibly his connection with Bartley's shortage as state treasurer would come out.

The attack of the World-Herald on Edgar Howard seemed to have been made from the fact that Howard had written the nominees on the democrat ticket that they should prevent Hitchcock's name going on the ticket as his name would prove a millstone to the party and in that letter alluded to Hitchcock's connection with the state treasurer's Bartley's shortage. This letter being shown to Mr. Hitchcock by one of the candidates was the occasion of the World-Herald denouncing Edgar Howard as a liar.

The following is the letter Howard wrote to Mr. Hitchcock and demanded an apology but did not promise his support should the apology be offered.

HOWARD'S LETTER AND HITCHCOCK'S REPLY.

COLUMBUS, Neb., August 22, 1910—Han G. M. Hitchcock, Editor World Herald, Omaha, Neb.: Dear Sir: In several issues of your newspaper just prior to the late primary election you branded as false certain statements contained in a letter written by my hand with reference to your candidacy for the democratic nomination for the United States senate. I take it for granted that you will give me space in your newspaper to set aside as far as possible the impression you may have conveyed to my mind as touching my own veracity.

We are now entering upon an important political campaign. It is our mutual hope that we may be able to elect the democratic ticket in the state of Nebraska this year. In order to do so we must employ every energy and every advantage in the democratic behalf, remembering always that Nebraska is a republican state and that to win a democratic victory we must not only successfully appeal to all the democratic electors but also to sufficient of the republicans to overcome the natural republican majority.

It is the desire of my heart to do all within my power for the promotion of the democratic cause. If I should permit your charge of falsehood to pass unchallenged then I fear my advocacy of the cause would lose force and effect. Therefore, in the interest of the cause which is to you and I mutually dear, I now address you. It is always best that workers together in a common cause should be very frank with each other, thus avoiding complications. In all frankness I wrote that letter which you publicly branded as containing false statements regarding your own political dealings with near criminal and real criminal interests in politics. In democratic frankness I stated that in my belief your nomination for the national senate would be a political mistake, and that your record of subservience to the public service corporations would make your nomination nothing less than a millstone about the neck of the democratic state ticket. I did not write a falsehood, Mr. Hitchcock, I did not falsely represent your record, I simply wrote the democratic truth in that letter, and I greatly regret that in a moment of passion you laid the charge of falsehood against me, because, if any considerable number of Nebraskans believe you then how can those same people believe me when I shall write appeal for our ticket, or when I shall write to refute campaign charges against our candidates?

I greatly fear, Mr. Hitchcock, that you underestimate the injury done to your own cause by that unfortunate and passionate assault upon my veracity. I have tried to win a good name in my home state. I have been hoping that if I could not win men to say that Edgar Howard was brilliant, they still might say he was truthful. I have earnestly hoped that if I could not convince men that Edgar Howard was a smart politician still they might say he was a square one. But if there shall be in Nebraska any person who is influenced by a statement in the World-Herald then, as to that person all my hope is dead—struck down by the advertisement of my falsity in your own newspaper. Of course, you are anticipating, Mr. Hitchcock, that in the approaching campaign very serious charges may be lodged against our candidates by the enemy, and I shall be on duty every hour. But don't you see you have tied my hands? Do you not realize that, by advertising me a falsifier, you have done much to detract from the power of my appeals when I shall ask the people to believe not at all the wicked charges which may be laid at your door during the campaign?

Already it is intimated that you will be specifically charged with being in bondage to two millionaire owners of public service corporation in Omaha and that the sum of your due bills in their office drawers will be named in detail.

But there is possibility of a more serious charge against you Mr. Hitchcock, I tremble in presence of that possibility. In contemplation of its serious nature I doubly regret that that the World-Herald has branded me a falsifier thus rendering impotent the best defense I may make in your behalf. This charge is so serious that should it be lodged against you there would be an imperative demand for your withdrawal from the ticket. You may recall that once upon a time the republicans of Nebraska nominated for a state office a man who was denounced by the World-Herald as a beneficiary of the Bartley defalcations. Instantly there came a demand from a respectable republican for the withdrawal of this man from the state ticket, and the sentiment was so strong that he was compelled to withdraw. Suppose that the enemy should lodge such a charge against you, Mr. Hitchcock. Suppose that the enemy should allege that you procured from State Treasurer Bartley many thousands of dollars of the people's money on your own note and that the money if ever returned to Bartley, never found its way back to the state treasury.

I did my democratic duty, Mr. Hitchcock, when I appealed to democrats to refrain from placing a dangerous name upon our ticket. I can afford to suffer under your charge that I am a falsifier, sustained, as I am, by the comforting knowledge of the performance of a duty due my party and state. Yours very truly,

EDGAR HOWARD

"Of course Mr. Hitchcock refused to print the above letter in the World-Herald. He kept the letter several days then wrote the following threatening reply:

"Omaha, Aug. 23, 1910—Mr. Edgar Howard, The Telegram, Columbus, Neb., Sir—Your letter has been received. Your support is not wanted and your attack is not feared. You have posed as a purist but there are enough people who know your real life to appreciate your hypocrisy. Start the attack if you want to. My life, private as well as public, is an open book.

Very Truly,

G. M. Hitchcock
